What Should We Do to Hand Down War Experiences ?

The purpose is teaching young people about the history of war. We seriously thought about 「What do we need to stop wars and realize the peaceful world?」 As a result, we thought that it was important for us to continue handing down war experiences to people who are younger than us. This is because we young generation don't know the fact of war. So we explained how people experienced war and showed the next generation. First we found how Hiroshima Jogakuinn High School discussed topics like this. For an activity they think about the peace through education. They try to train people who can share peace with the world. We think that there are better ways to discuss misery and war experiences. There are less opportunities to learn about these events and we would like more people to be able to learn about them. We taught an Elementary School class on World War II and then gave the students questionnaires. We asked them, "What had the strongest impact on you?" We had prepared some questions, pictures, movies, personal experiences, some quizzes about meals during the war, and the letters written by who had experienced wars. We believe that our research is one of the step to stop wars. Now we want to continue to convey the war histories and misery of them to next generations.
